Communication

Word Bank
"I" Statements	Attentive Listening	Ineffective
Assertiveness	Effective	Eye Contact
Defensive	Inappropriate Displays of Emotion	Mixed Messages
Attacks	Tone	Body Language
Feedback

Different Forms of Communication

Assertive: Aggressive:
Passive Aggressive:
Passive:
Avoidance:
can lead to conflicts among family and friends. Some examples of ineffective communication include:
1 : Saying one thing while your body language or way of talking communicates something else.
Examples:
2: When your emotions get in the way of what you are trying to say. Examples:

3: Accusing the other person or making the other person become defensive instead of helping him or her truly listen to what you are trying to say.
defensive instead of helping film of her truly listen to what you are trying to say.
Examples:
Communication:
communication of thought, feelings and emotions involves several different communication skills. To communicate effectively use:
1: Being able to communicate needs and feelings honestly and directly without intending to hurt others. THis does not mean being loud and aggressive.
2: Saying what you want or feel without accusing or blaming the other person.
Examples:
3: How a person's voice communicates emotion.
4 what a person says using facial expressions and body movements instead of words. Your facial expressions and gestures communicate more than you may think!
5 : consistent is mportant when talking and when listening.
6. : actively paying attention to a person when 6: actively paying attention to a person when speaking. This involves using body language and eye contact to let the person know you care about the contact to let the person know you care about the contact to let the person know you care about the contact to let the person know you care about the contact to let the person know you care about the contact to let the person know you care about the contact to let the person know you care about the contact to let the person know you care about the contact to let the person know you care about the contact to let the person know you care about the contact to let the person know you care about the contact to let the person know you care about the contact to let the person know you care about the person when you care about the person when you can be person to the person to the person when you can be person to the person when you can be person to the person to the person when you can be person to the person to the person to the person when you can be person to the person to the person when you can be person to the person to the person when you can be person to the person t what he or she is saying.
7: messages that a listener gives to a person who is speaking. A simple nod or saying "I don't understand" are good examples of doing this.
simple nod or saying "I don't understand" are good examples of doing this.
and rememberNever be!!! Even if you feel attacked say c alm, c ool, c onfident and be positive!!!